Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

University of the Air was a distance learning initiative started by CTV's regional television affiliates to offer degree-related courses on video, taught by university professors across Canada, including Dalhousie faculty. Production started in 1966 and continued until 1983. Courses were structured into series around a central theme and divided into five episodes.

Custodial history

Collection was transferred from the Dalhousie University Public Relations Office.

Scope and content

Collection comprises four teaching series produced in Atlantic Canada and hosted by Dalhousie University faculty, including series one (The Oceans); series two (The Structure of Sound); series three (20th Century Latin America: Why Revolution?); and series four (Textiles: Their Development and Effects).
